

The Glass Effect:

Glass is known to add style and elegance to the facade as well as the interior space. A glass partition neatly divides the place, creating a smaller and cosier personal space which is relatively separate from the more functional zones in the house. “The vertical and horizontal dimensions of the glass partitions play a major role in defining the virtual boundaries in the room. Elegant metal or synthetic frames add prominence to the glass dividers and make them stand out effortlessly,” shares Bhuvan Kapila, Founder and Principle Architect at WMA.

Glass nowadays is one of the favoured choices to ensure sustainability and is considered a real, tangible option to provide the functional solution to segregate space and yet add a “virtual” sense of extra openness to a confined area. “Powder-coated aluminium grid framework encapsulating the 10mm toughened glass adds to the modern flavour of design. This type of partition design can be used at the entrance, at meeting rooms, to separate chambers from general office or maybe in passages depending on purpose and design,” explains Designer Amit Maitra and Kallol Baroi of AK Enterprises Pvt. Ltd.
